STOLEN, HIDDEN AWAY OR POISONED?

PRETTY LITTLE HEIRSS TO THE MILLIONS OF OLD NICHOLAS CREEDE, THE LUCKY MINER, STRANGELY VANISHES AT A CRITICAL MOMENT.

A SINGULAR lost contest is being fought for a fortune of $1,000,000. This fortune will belong to Dorothy Edith Creede, a pretty little girl in her teens, if her side establishes its case. And just at the critical moment, when her lawyer need her, she has mysteriously vanished—not a living trace of the maiden can be found.

The history of the case involves a long series of romantic events in the wild early mining days of Nevada, Colorado and California.

The founder of the fortune was Nicholas Creede, the famous old miner who has given his name to Creede, Col. He began his adventurous life as a lieutenant in a volunteer company of Indian fighters, which fought in the Pawnee wars. Then he trooped the hills as a prospector, footsore and often starving, until he struck a rich silver lode in a most barren place. In pious memory of the famished wanderings in the wilderness he named it "The Holy Moses," and this name stuck to it even after he sold it for $700,000. At this period his devoted wife used to help him with the pick and load down the "junks."

His next great find was the "Amethyst" mine, which brought him millions and for a time paid dividends of $40,000 a month. He also owned one-third of the town of Creede, Col.

Then he retired from the mining business and settled down to spend his fortune in a palatial though somewhat garish residence in Los Angeles. He was not happy, however, for he had separated from the devoted wife of his struggling years, and the fact preyed on his mind.

Because he felt lonely and miserable in his old age and in need of somebody to love, he adopted the little girl, Dorothy Edith Creede, who is now the centre of interest. She was the daughter of a woman who had led an almost incredibly romantic and checkered career. She was born in San Francisco of very poor parents, and was living in great misery when her beauty and grace attracted the attention of Mrs. Scott, the kindly widow of a rich warehouse owner, who formally adopted her. The girl then took the name of Edith Scott, and attended for a brief time Fields Seminary, where her beauty, her fine contralto voice and her incipient dramatic talent excited admiration.

Then Mrs. Scott married Captain William G. Waters, an eccentric character, and Edith went to live with them. She adopted the name of Waters, and this habit of changing her name from time to time has clung to her throughout her singularly varied life.

Captain Waters found that his wife needed a change of climate, and took her to Southern California. There he took possession of the wonderful island of San Miguel, where he lived like a feudal lord. This island is the outcropping of the Santa Barbara Channel group, and having no harbor, is inaccessible whenever there is any sea running. There is no record that San Miguel was transferred by Mexico to the United States at the time of the cession of California, and there is no record that Mexico before that ever granted title in the island to any one. Captain Waters therefore regarded himself as the first occupier and sovereign of the island. Finally, the United States revenue officers attempted to land on San Miguel to collect taxes, but were driven back to their boats by Captain Waters and his retainers. Later, President Cleveland instructed the United States Marshal for Southern California to take a sufficient force and assert American sovereignty on the island. Captain Waters then bowed to superior force, without admitting the rights of the Government.

On San Miguel Captain Waters built himself a substantial house at a point 400 feet above the sea.

His flocks pastured upon the island, and the little domain was completely self-sustaining.

Here Edith Scott Waters grew up as wild as the birds that flew over San Miguel. She roamed over the island, usually barefooted, and grew strong and beautiful in the sunshine and breezes. She never left the island. Her actual memory of the great world beyond San Miguel grew very dim, and she recreated it with a romantic young girl's imagination.

Then Mrs. Waters died, and life on the island became lonelier than before. Edith's only female companion was an aged Indian squaw. The lord of the island was a stern and autocratic ruler. He would not take the girl away for a visit. He was kind to her in his way, supplying her with books, a piano and other luxuries. She kept house for him, and helped to handle the berries.

One day a man from the outside world was driven ashore in a sailing boat in a storm, and forced to spend some days on the island. She asked him all sorts of girlish questions about herself, and he told her that her beauty would excite the admiration of all America if she appeared on the stage. That decided her to run away.

Two weeks later Captain Waters left the island on a brief business journey. While he was away a sailing schooner lay to off the island and sent a boat ashore for provisions. Edith coaxed the sailors to take her away to the mainland, and thus she escaped from what she had come to regard as a prison. Standing on the rail of the little schooner, her heart beat wildly as she felt herself free at last—a runaway, but free from her island prison.

She went to San Francisco, and her beauty gained her a place on the stage, although she had absolutely no training. She had a splendid figure, fine features and a very winning manner. Her hair was of the rare ripe corn shade of blondness, which cannot be produced artificially. On the stage she assumed the name of Iona Doane.

At the end of three months John Mackay Walker, son of a millionaire and early companion of John W.

Science Thinks Cupid Can Be Caught and Examined Under the Microscope and the Great Mystery of Love Explained.

By Dr. Carleton Simon.
The Distinguished New York Brain and Nerve Specialist.

THE primal evidence of love exists in the smallest atom of the universe—in the invisible gases, to everything that is within and without the range of our vision. Its working law can be perceived in the behavior of one drop of water to another, in the influence of one star upon another.

The attractive force in chemistry is termed "chemism," in electricity it is called "electricity," in magnetism and in phenomena relating to a general way to matter it is designated as "magnetic attraction."

In the animal kingdom the attraction of one animal to another of the opposite sex is due to the magnetic force. It is a purely physical force, and is not, as is often supposed, a mental selection entering into the choice. But in human beings this force is imperceptible, supplemented and changed through the agency of the mind, which sends higher modes of expression in its quivering influence.

We may see this exemplified in the attractiveness which beauty holds for all—especially when it is added refinement or any particularly desirable mental or moral quality.

A supreme power has implanted in each of us a germ of immortality, which, I have often thought, must be the basis of the attraction between two persons of opposite sex—a subconscious yearning which time and distance cannot dissipate; something that lives longer than mere passion, a thing beyond our ken.

In every particle and atom of the universe there is at work a great attractive force, whose purpose seems to be one of evolution and perpetuation, and which finds its highest development in the position we call love.

All this is a very proper and extremely important field for scientific research, and already some progress has been made in this direction.

SCIENCE is investigating love and tells upon one person. She herself could not see where it comes, how we catch it, tell just how this has come about, but the fact is undeniable—though, naturally, she does not know how to explain it. She may imply her to counsel it carefully, but she cannot tell us how to get it. She is the man who wants, above all others. Upon him, her choice is definitely fixed, and nearly everything, but who could have known that it would attempt to investigate it, as if it were a love? Nevertheless, the exact physics, when they are able to find out, find almost nothing when they go after it, more exactly, to have made some woman's discovery in regard to the anatomy, so to speak, of that tender feeling between the sexes which has justly been called the "master passion."

Yes, it would appear that Love does possess a recognizable anatomy. It is not merely a thing of imagination, beyond reason by the learned investigator. In the reality, it is susceptible of classification as a great phenomenon, and of dissection, as one might say—the elements of which it is composed revealing themselves in most curious and intricate arrangement.

Dr. Carleton Simon, a distinguished New York physician, is one of the scientists who have given attention to the study of the most interesting of the passions; and he says that love is based upon a physical law which is manifested in every stage of the evolution. This law is called the law of attraction, and its operation may be perceived in the behavior of one drop of water to another, as well as in the influence of one star upon another.

But the same attraction, which in the lower animals is called the "mating instinct," in human beings extends to the physical and into the domain of the spiritual—the latter region over which the soul presides. It has taken wings, and by their help man has soared—above a world of material force.

Now, in trying to take to pieces, as it were, this greatest of the passions, with a view to finding out what it is made of, it is natural that the investigator, in the first place, should try to discover how it begins.

A young girl, let us say, is acquainted with a considerable number of young men. All of them possess certain amount of interest for her, because of their looks, or their good looks or rather qualities, which she finds attractive. But, though it may occur to her to wonder whether or not she could fall in love with this one or that one, none of them, for the time being at all events, awakens in her heart the great emotion.

Love does not come in response to a bidding. When the little girl arrives, she does so on her own initiative, apparently, and not in obedience to a summons. Yet come she will, answer she will, even without, as well as to every man. And once arrived, he will seek a "lot of trouble" that the girl's presence can bring to his notice.

Before she quite realizes what has happened, she is the young girl that has developed. It gives exactly a chance thing, really. "The instinct, the lover and the loved, which have been so long separated, are now united. Meanwhile, the sense, which poet are of imagination all compact," are the doorways through which love's approachers are made, other openings of entrance into the citadel of the heart. Just what sparks may kindle the smoldering fire, no one can foretell—except, perhaps, by just a ray of guess from a pair of eyes, or an old poem of a swain's figure, or a profile of a pretty face reflected on the wall, or a glimpse of a bewitching pair of shoulders."

Love's eyes are on the stars, but his feet are on the ground, and mere physical attractions have their allurement for him. Where is the lovely young woman whose interest in a young man is not enhanced by a couple of theatre tickets and a little supper after the play? It is a wise lover who appreciates the value of such matters. Many, indeed, in the match that has been brought about through the opportune sending of a bouquet of flowers.

But, when love has really arrived, a higher realm is entered, and the poetry of passion is reignited in the background.

It is sympathy that, as to us, strikes the match and sets the flame of love alight. The strings of a guitar may often be touched, without a touch of human hands, by striking upon a piano in the same room sympathetic chord. It is the same way with that wonderful instrument, the human heart. The man strikes a chord that causes the woman to feel a sympathetic vibration within her—a vibration which increases in intensity with every repetition. Thus it is that love comes.

But there must be reciprocity. If a young woman loves a man and he does not return the feeling, the tender regard in which she holds him will surely perish. Love cannot be one-sided. If the romantic passion be entertained by the man, but call forth no response from the woman, it will fade, like a photograph that is not fixed.

It is often said that propriety has more to do than anything else with the growth of the romantic passion. It would

They pledge themselves to each other, and possession. It is an ecstasy. What makes passion. With love it is likewise. The fact that it is a young woman says: "He is mine, and no other shall share him." And, in his heart, he too says: "She is mine, and no other shall share her."

It is a strange thing, this love, which people cannot body show."

BOSTON AMERICAN, SUNDAY, MAY 5, 1907.

WE POSSESS THREE THINGS

The earth, our source of wealth. The hand, to do the work. The brain, to direct the hand and plan the task.

THE trinity of life on this earth is shown in this picture. It is a simplified presentation of everything that we possess and of our great problem.

Seen from the vast distances of infinite space, we human beings are tiny little living germs fastened to this earth as it rolls through space with the sun in its mysterious journey. How we got here, we do not KNOW. Where we are going next, we do not KNOW. Religious faith makes the lives of many happier, giving them comfort and full confidence. Outside the revelations of religion, we have as actual tangible possessions THAT WE KNOW ABOUT only three great things, the earth, the hand, the brain.

The development of these three properties are man's real task on the earth.

Before we came here the earth was a dreadful place, inhabited by hideous, monstrous creatures. We could not have lived in its atmosphere until millions of years had passed of early geological development.

Finally man appeared. At first, he inherited a wild, undisciplined earth, a hand without skill, and a brain with only a glimmer of thought.

Slowly through the hundreds of centuries man has made the earth, the hand and the brain what they are to-day. And slowly, in the thousands of centuries of human life that lie ahead of us man will make that earth and hand and brain WHAT THEY OUGHT TO BE, realizing the magnificent destiny that divine justice reserves for us.

The earth at first was a wilderness. Deserts, and swamps, jungles, forests entirely beyond man's control, were its features. The paths of men were paths laid out by huge mammoths plowing their way through brush to food or to water.

Primitive man, learning to cultivate, did his work high up on the sides of mountains—you can see the traces of such work in Scotland, with the terraces built to keep the water in the soil. You can see such work actually going on to-day in China. Men worked up on the hillsides because they lacked the tools to fight and cut down the forests which in the valleys made the open plains unknown.

Think what marvelous little man, with that developing brain to guide him, has accomplished already in his very short life on earth.

He was a fighting savage, living in caves, or on rude platforms above the lake for safety. His greatest intellectual effort, the best thing that early brain could do, was to plan some way of killing a boar or of murdering another man with a sharp flint.

The rough, hairy hand, with the half-developed thumb, was only a FIGHTING weapon. There was no aspiration under the slanting forehead. And the thick prognathous jaw stood out from the red hair on the face like that of an animal.

What wonders have been accomplished on this earth by that hand, directed by that brain!

The mind of man measures the sun's distance and weighs with precision this earth on which we live.

We map out distances so vast that they must be measured by "light years," the unit of measurement being the distance that light would travel in a year going at the rate of 175,000 miles a second.

In the brain of savage, early man the first impulse was himself, the second was his immediate family, the third, and very faint, was rudimentary ambition. We have progressed so far that millions of men already put ambition, the DUTY to the race, first, devotion to the family second, and devotion to self LAST OF ALL.

The human forehead has come forward and the human jaw has gone backwards. Brutality has declined, thought for others has blossomed magically, under the beautiful influence of the teachings of Christ.

The mind of man is already a wonderful engine, seeking the truth for its own sake, solving wonderful and apparently hopeless problems, storing up knowledge through the marvellous inventions of speech and writings.

Truly man may be proud of the work which his infancy has already accomplished and eager for the great intellectual progress still before him.

Think of the hand, what IT has learned. Long ago it ceased developing physically; the brain supplied to man the thousands of tools which evolution alone could supply to the lower animals.

That hand which at first could only hurt a stick with a sharpened stone attacked, or hamstringing an animal from ambush, now grinds the lens of a telescope that carries the eye of man into the profound depths of this wonderful universe.

That hand makes and adjusts the spring of a watch that, with unerring certainty, accompanies the earth in its daily movement, telling off the hours.

That hand which formerly clung in terror to the drifting log on the water, now builds and launches an iron boat that crosses the ocean in a week, or makes oceans unite where continents separated them, by the digging of canals.

The earth, which was given to us a tangled, pathless, homeless wilderness, where man fought with the animal for his existence and fought with nature herself, is now habitable, conquered. AND BEFORE MEN'S WORK SHALL END IT WILL BE A VAST, BEAUTIFUL GARDEN, DESERTS AND SWAMPS UNKNOWN, AND UNKNOWN, ALSO, HATED BETWEEN MEN.

The wild animal, formerly a menace and a terror, is now a curiosity. Man travels over the mountains comfortably in a palace on wheels where once he walked painfully with torn feet. The power that hauls him is the coal stored away for him millions of years ago, or the electric power that once frightened his superstitious mind as a flash in the clouds, and that is now his obedient servant chained in the wire or the rail.

One thousand miles from home a man can talk to his wife or child, and recognize the voice. He can lift tons by the gentle pressure of a finger on a button. He digs up the earth's surface and plants it, with machinery. The waterfalls light his cities, move his street cars to-day, as he studies the secret of using the greater, absolutely inexhaustible power of the tides and of the sun's own direct heat.

Truly humanity, with the earth for a home, the hand for a tool and the brain for guide, has done wonderful things.

Study the achievements of humanity in its babyhood, and let your mind be full of hope and enthusiasm, as you think of the great work that remains to be done and that will be done.

From isolated human beings, hating and killing each other, we have developed into united nations. How can we doubt that our path leads to a great final union of all men in one great family of brotherhood, all happy, all striving to help each other, to prove themselves worthy of the wonderful opportunity, the safety, the justice and the kindness prepared for us here on earth.

MAN is supposed to be the highest type of animal created by God.

Yet cleanliness is acknowledged to be the attribute next to godliness.

In case this latter assertion is accepted, the first supposition must fall in earth. Man is, taken in his primitive state and studied in the aggregate, the most unclean of all animals.

It requires civilization, education and prosperity to arouse in man an appreciation of cleanliness.

And in most foreign lands the filthy conditions of the masses is appalling.

If cleanliness is next to godliness, it seems to me there are just four countries on earth that are approaching godliness.

And the whole cause is due with ignorance and superstition added. I saw mothers carrying dirty-faced babies through the streets, and making no effort to brush away the vicious flies that swarmed about the eyes and mouth of the poor infants. Added to this, a brisk wind was

I know some dainty, exquisitely clean, devoted mother cats who take such care of their kittens that they seem a higher type of motherhood than the wretched-looking, ill-smelling herds of women I have seen in many lands, nursing sick children at wretched benches.

Pretty Society Favorite's
Wedding April's Last
and Most Notable.

LAST and most brilliant among April's wedding was that of Miss Margaret Atherton, daughter of the late John Atherton, and the late Mrs. John Atherton. The church was simply decorated for the occasion with a few sweet peas and roses around the altar and on the walls. The bride wore a white gown with a high collar and long sleeves, and a long veil. She was accompanied by her father, Mr. John Atherton, and her mother, Mrs. John Atherton. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. J. W. Alden, and the wedding was a most notable event in the city.

BOSTON STAGE BEAUTY, LOST 2 MONTHS, HUNTED IN 4 CITIES

MADLINE KEENE A FOUL PLAY VICTIM?

Last Wrote Mother Feb. 28,
When in Buffalo, Saying
She Might Enter Hospital.

The police of Boston, Buffalo, Philadelphia and New York are investigating the mysterious disappearance of beautiful Madeline Keene, who was last heard from February 28 when she was ill and failed to appear at a hospital at Buffalo. The authorities of the different Buffalo hospitals do not know where she is, and any of these hospitals, and the officials of the four cities, have been unable to find a trace of her. It is from that she is dead and her body is expected to be found in one of the cities.

Madeline Keene, handsome Boston actress, lost since February 28, when she wrote her mother from Buffalo that she thought of entering a hospital, as she was ill. She was ill. She was in the 'Isle of Spice' company, the manager of which knows nothing of her whereabouts.

Dear Madeline Keene,
I have been thinking of you all the time since I heard of your disappearance. I hope you are all right and that you will soon be home. I have been very worried about you and I hope you will soon be home.

Missing Since February 28.
The works of John J. Smith of Boston, an actor of 38 years, have been considered that something had happened to him since he wrote his mother from Buffalo on February 28, when he said he might enter a hospital. The authorities of the different Buffalo hospitals do not know where he is, and any of these hospitals, and the officials of the four cities, have been unable to find a trace of him.

Parents Mother Will Go Mad.
It will be either the grave or the madhouse for her poor mother, Mrs. Madeline Keene, who is now in Buffalo, N. Y., waiting for news of her daughter.

PRIZES FOR BEST CARE OF HOMES

Winter Hill to Stimulate Civic Pride by Rewarding Efforts of Residents.

By offering a large sum in prizes, the Winter Hill Improvement Association expects to arouse great civic pride in that section of Somerville, between Fellowship East and the Midford line, and from Broadway to the Mystic river. A prize of $50 will be given for the best kept premises. Prizes will be awarded at the meeting of the association on the third Wednesday in September.

A person who takes care of his or her premises will be entitled to one or more prizes. Every household will be asked to follow his or her own inclination and cultivate flowers, vegetables or a lawn.

The police on which the committee has depended, have been very successful in removing litter and waste, keeping the place

The Man of the Future

10 Massive Volumes; 310 Maps; 8000 Illustrations; 150,000 Encyclopedic Subjects; 200,000 Geographical Entries; 300,000 Quotations; 500,000 Encyclopedic Dictionary-Definitions. Size of volumes 12x9x2½ inches; Weight 75 lbs.

Place this matchless Library of Reference in your home, and it will not only prove of daily use to the grown-up people, but it will so attract and interest the young folks that they will quickly acquire The "CENTURY habit" of looking up things, of making sure of words and persons and places — of all fact-knowledge necessary to the coming man or woman. You owe it to yourself and to those in whom you are interested to get THE CENTURY NOW, especially when you can secure it at so small an outlay and on such convenient terms as to make it

The Greatest Book Bargain We Have Ever Offered; You Can JUST NOW Save $24 on the Lowest Former Price

The Commission then proceeded to put the price of the work down to bed rock, CUTTING OUT ALL BOOK AGENTS' COMMISSIONS, all extras of every kind, so as to be able to bring the cost down for the time being to only $18 (including the Magazine for 2 years), whereas the lowest former cost had been $60. In addition to the little price, and in order that no one earnestly desiring the work need be excluded, the following convenient terms were arranged.

ONE DOLLAR

So you see how easy it just now is to secure a CENTURY set, which is at once a complete dictionary of the English language, a comprehensive, up-to-date encyclopedia and a complete new atlas of the world; also a hand-book of history, a gazetteer and a library of biographical and literary reference, making it a GENERAL REFERENCE WORK OF VAST INTEREST AND IMMENSE UTILITY.

The JOHN RUSKIN, who was a great teacher as well as a scholar and writer, said in substance: "When you read you must put into the habit of learn- ing the meaning and correct pronunciation of every doubtful word as you go along. You might read all the books in the British Museum and remain illiterate, but if you read ten pages of a good book carefully, in some measure, in some manner, you are an educated person. Never let a word in an attempt that looks suspicious, escape you. You will find it even at first interesting and at last endlessly amusing."

That describes THE "CENTLEY habit." It is fascinating—this study of words and facts—when you have THE CENTLEY at hand to help you out of your doubt. Hundreds of successful men and women keep the ten volumes' within easy reach to read and consult for aid in their daily work. There are more than 5,000 sets owned in Boston alone. This community has acquired THE "CENTLEY habit."

Bear in mind this edition for 1927 has been set down to the present time; it is the VERY LATEST; it is UNABRIDGED; in a word, it is the ONLY EDITION now issued by THE CENTURY COMPANY. From a mechanical point of view this volume is a perfection, being fully equal to the high standards of former editions. The work is printed, as always, at the famous De Vinne Press in the standard of excellence for this country, and the binding, as always, is by Taylors. "Taylors' bound" means "best bound," as befits a work destined to last a lifetime.

BOSTON

But come to our Book Store and inspect this superb edition in the different bindings. See for yourself what an attractive and valuable literary and educational offering is presented, and at what an exceptional bargain.

Remember, the number of sets allotted to Boston and New England was originally limited, and these are going very rapidly at the little price and on the conventional terms offered, therefore, in order not to miss this opportunity

You Must Act Promptly

First, those who know THE CENTRAL and know they want it may order at once (personally at the store, by mail or telephone), thus making sure of a set at the little price. (See paragraph 1 in Form 1 at right)

Second. Those desiring further information may call at the store and inspect the volumes or send for THE CENTURY Club's 64-page book, showing 1000s of illustrations, maps, etc., with full information of the terms of the distribution, as to enabling a bulk order, or the direct purchase of a set at a little more than the little price.

U.S. GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE: 1917

Third, Those engaged in special professions and occupations—clergymen, educators, physicians, lawyers, engineers, architects, etc.—who feel that they should like know to what extent THE CENTER will aid them personally in their own field of endeavor, and who desire to further the cause of the Center, are invited to send a letter to the Director, THE CENTER, 1000 Broadway, New York 10, which to examine and test the work as to their own particular needs, with privilege of return and money refunded, and transportation charges paid by us. (See paragraph 2 in this letter.)

This offer is exclusive, limited to those living in New England.

Then sign and mail promptly.

ANNOUNCEMENT

We are pleased to announce to the people of Boston and New England that we have opened a suite of offices at No. 601-602 Berkeley Building, corner of Boylston and Berkeley Streets, Boston.

THE REVOLUTION OF DENTISTRY. The Alveolar Method of supplying missing teeth without the aid of "partial plates" or "bridge" work has revolutionized the science of dentistry.

WHAT IS THE ALVEOLAR METHOD? If anyone has two or more teeth left in either jaw, no matter whether sound or loose, we can, by the Alveolar Method, supply all of the teeth practically as firm in the mouth as nature's were in the beginning.

DR. MARTIN'S DISCOVERY. The discovery of the cure of Pyorrhea was made by Dr. Martin. The cure is a simple and easy one, and it is a permanent cure.

FREE DIAGNOSIS. We invite the people of Boston and vicinity to come to our office for a free diagnosis. This service not only costs nothing, but entails no obligation to have work done.

SEND FOR FREE BOOK, "ALVEOLAR DENTISTRY." If it is not possible for you to visit our office at this time, we will send you a free book entitled "The Alveolar Method," which explains in detail the method. We will enclose at the same time a book of testimonials from people who have had the work done.

WE ARE GENERAL PRACTITIONERS. While the Alveolar Method is our great specialty, we are general practitioners of the first class. The men who are able to do this class of work that they are called upon to do in our offices must be men of the highest ability.

HARVARD BOYS SMOTHER DARTMOUTH ATHLETES IN ANNUAL DUAL MEET

BY I. S. CLARK.

It was scheduled as a dual track meet between Harvard and Dartmouth in the Stadium yesterday, but, to be more truly fair, it was purely a romp for the Harvard athletes, as the crew of Dartmouth did not have any chance to win.

At the end of the afternoon's sport, when the third event on the card had been completed, Harvard had taken a score of 84 while Dartmouth was scrambling together 18.

There was some fun for the New Hampshire boys by the fact that they went out last year's marks on this year, as they made a new record in the 100 yard dash, beating the number of points collected in 1901.

HERE THEY ARE--THE "SNAPSHOT" TEN--ARE YOU ONE OF THEM?

Shopping District Yields Rich Harvest for the "Snapshot Man"; So Watch Out or He May Get You in His Travels.

HERE they are--the "Snapshot" Ten. To say nothing of the baby.

These ten people were photographed by the Boston Sunday American's snapshot man during the noon hour last Friday along Washington street in the shopping district.

If you are one of the ten, as indicated by the numbers on them, come to the Snapshot Man of the Boston Sunday American at No. 82 Summer street, and get $10.

Seeks All Types for "Snapshot" Gallery.

The Snapshot Man tried to be liberal in his selections. He sought to "snap" old and young, men and women, nudes and matrons. He wanted his snapshot gallery to show a thoroughly representative group of Boston people.

Here is the result of his first effort. Don't you think he made a pretty good selection for his initial trip?

Don't cast this picture aside without looking over the faces, just because you didn't see the camera man take your picture. If you were along Washington street at the time mentioned, he may have "snapped" you without your knowing anything about it.

In regard to these "snapshot" experts, you "don't" always sometimes tell.

So look the picture over to-day. Also get a Boston Sunday

Now He's "At Home" to the "Lucky Ten," Each of Whom Will Receive Ten Dollars by Paying Him a Visit.

American hereafter, for this "snapshot" feature is to continue for more Sundays. If the Snapshot Man didn't get you last week he may this week, or next week, or later.

So you will do well to invest a nickel every Sunday, if for no other reason than to look over these snapshot layouts.

There is no special rule about the Snapshot Man's work. He is an independent individual. He goes out into the streets at certain times and "snaps" some people in the passing throng. He may photograph a white-haired woman, like the one in the foreground of this picture. He may "snap" the sample of domestic life so charmingly illustrated by the young mother wheeling the baby and go-cart.

Plans Harvest for Coming Week.

This mother and baby count as one in the Snapshot Man's way of reckoning, though no reflection is meant upon the baby--not by any means. The Snapshot Man likes babies.

He may snap you and he may not. But if your picture is included among the ten numbered in these Sunday snapshot groups, you are entitled to ten dollars.

The Snapshot Man will be out somewhere in the city next week. Watch the columns of the BOSTON AMERICAN every day to find out when and where he will appear during the coming week to "snap" his victims for next Sunday.

Lucky Friday for Ten-Dollar Ten.

The Snapshot Man did have fun on his first trip last Friday. And, by the way, who says Friday is an unlucky day. It can't be for you if your picture is among the ten-dollar ten.

He went along Washington street leisurely. Near the corner of Temple place he caught his first victim, the young woman on the extreme left of the picture, with the veil over her face. She was walking along at a "right smart" smart pace as they say in Dixie, but she didn't get by the camera.

Satisfied with his first victim the Snapshot Man loaded up with a fresh plate and was just in time to get a splendid "snap" of the white-haired woman on the other end of the picture line.

"Clicks" Mamma, Baby and Go-Cart.

A few minutes later he spied the young mother wheeling the baby. "Click," and mamma, baby, go-cart and all were added to the ten-dollar list. The mother smiled in surprise and the baby opened his--or her--well, anyway, the baby's mouth was open.

Then the Snapshot Man took others, whose faces you see here. Now he is "at home" to the lucky ten.

LEAGUE'S SUCCESS PROOF

New Party Offers Independent Citizens Re-

Ruled Organizations.

BRYAN EXTENDS COMPLIMENTS TO THE LEAGUE, IN HIS COMMONER

MR. BRYAN publishes in the Commoner an article on the Independent League and the Democratic party, with much reference to the League which every member of that organization will appreciate. It seems, however, that the Commoner's article is more kind than sound. The Commoner says: "In joining a party, a man naturally asks two questions: First, what does the party stand for? And, second, what chance has the party of accomplishing its purpose?"

The Commoner apparently believes that the Democratic party stands for progress and reform, and that it has an encouraging prospect of an early victory.

It is difficult to see upon what this optimistic estimate is based. In 1896, the Democratic party did Mr. Bryan and left the honor to nominating him for the Presidency. The party was defeated by 201,416 votes. In 1900, the Democratic party again nominated Mr. Bryan, and was defeated by 240,706 votes. In 1904 the Democratic party nominated Mr. Parker and was defeated by 244,015 votes.

Move Away from Success
The movement of the Democratic party is, therefore, rather away from success than toward it. In State and municipal campaigns the Democratic party, by itself, has seldom been successful.

In Nebraska, Mr. Bryan of the Democratic party hardly exists. In 1890 it failed to carry the State for its worthy, honored and famous son. In 1904 it failed to elect a Democratic Legislature, although the result of such action would have been the election of Mr. Bryan to the United States Senate, to the great advantage of the State of Nebraska, of the Senate and the people generally.

Take the State of New York, where the Democratic party is supposed to be as strong as it is in any State outside of the South; it has not elected a Democratic Governor in twelve years, and twelve Republican State officials were only elected through the aid of the Independence League.

Add to this the fact that the Democratic party nationally has already lost one Southern State and is likely to lose a couple of others, and the situation does not seem to justify the Commoner's hopeful view.

What Are Democratic Party Principles?
The Commoner has faith in the principle of the Democratic party and believes that its platform, its candidates and its organization will appeal to the conscience and judgment of the reform element of the country.

What does the Commoner have to say? What are the principles of the Democratic party? The Democratic party was radical in 1900, conservative in 1904, and is now a sort of middle ground between the two. It is hard to define the principles of a party which is first for radicalism, then for conservatism, and then for a middle ground.

What is its organization? It is led in the House of Representatives by a colored lawyer, and in the National Senate by a convicted criminal of the United States Trust, and is represented by a professional gambling-brother as its man of the National Committee.

It is true that in New York by race track gamblers and bellies box and race track gamblers, the Democratic party has just been shown to be a party of the race track gamblers and bellies box.

Let us look at the candidates on the Democratic ticket last Fall. They were: Governor, a man who had been convicted of a crime; Attorney General, a man who had been convicted of a crime; State Comptroller, a man who had been convicted of a crime; State Senator, a man who had been convicted of a crime; State Representative, a man who had been convicted of a crime.

The Independent League is willing to be judged by the standards that the Commoner applies by its principles and the prospects of its success—although we do not believe with the Commoner that the great majority of the voters are unwilling to do "pioneer work."

The Democratic party was originally founded by men who were willing to do pioneer work; the Republican party was founded by men who were willing to do pioneer work; the United States was established as a nation and the Christian religion was spread throughout the world by men who were willing to do pioneer work and look to the future for results.

There are plenty of such men today who are willing to do the work the country requires of them. But even judged by the Commoner's standard of publicists and inventors, the Independent League has just shown for its encouragement. It is but a year and a half old, and has held two elections, but it has fought its campaign on definite principles and without modifying them or departing from them, and it has at least partial success in both campaigns.

No new party was ever begun with greater reasons for its existence and greater encouragement for its efforts.

The members of the Independence League think that this organization offers to honest Democrats and honest Republicans an opportunity to obtain through independent movement the reforms which they are unable to secure through the corruption controlled machine of their own parties, and believe that this movement offers the only opportunity as the original Republican platform desired, "to restore the action of the government to the principles of Washington and Jefferson."

M'CARREN'S DECLARATION
ROUSES EMPIRE STATE

Albany, N. Y., May 4.—The recent, in years, the Governor is receiving calls in killed. For extended at that, Senator R. M. McCarren, who has been charged with receiving favored himself from Standard Oil Company and has been denied the charge, delivered a piece of this sentiment after the Kelley debate in the Senate.

Whether his "arrangement" will stand with the Legislature depends upon the powers of resolution of the Assembly. It must be remembered that there is no respectable opposition to the recent bill, and all the numerous constituents have, both this session and last, not only

CONCORD, N. H., May 4.—That there will be no trial of the main question at issue in the suit to compel Charles A. Fiske and others to make an accounting of their conduct of the affairs of Mary Baker Eddy, Editor of the Christian Science Church, at the present term of court is now a practical certainty.

The term which opened in this city the first of April is far advanced, but case being left for the jury, and that will be disposed of early next week.

The court proceeding May 20 is only to try the motion of the trustees of Mrs. Eddy's estate that they be made real plaintiffs in the suit, instead of Mrs. Eddy's son, George W. Fiske, and others who brought the suit.

It is expected that the hearing will not take more than two days if it is not closed on the next day. It is here that the question is decided as to whether the motion will be granted or not.

The motion will be granted if the court finds that the trustees of Mrs. Eddy's estate are not real plaintiffs in the suit, and that Mrs. Eddy is the real plaintiff.
